Tokyo has a humid subtropical climate and four distinct seasons. The summer months (Jun-Aug) are hot and sticky due to humidity, while winters (Dec-Feb) can get fairly cold, with occasional snowfall. The warmest month is August and the coolest month is January. Summers can be rainy and Tokyo's rainy season usually lasts from early June to late July. The rain is not constant and the city still gets plenty of sun over this period. The best time to visit Tokyo is in the shoulder seasons of spring and autumn.
